

Walls Tumble Down

1977 Original caption from the July 10, 1977, Nashville Banner: "And the walls come tumbling down ..." Demolition of the old NC&StL Railway building at 10th Ave. N. and Broadway, one of Nashville's oldest landmarks, is expected to be completed within a week, according to Doochin Wrecking Co., contractors." Today a Holiday Inn Express occupies the site, at 920 Broadway, across from the Frist Center for the Visual Arts. (Image: Nashville Public Library, Nashville Room, photo by Bill Goodman)

NC&St.L Correction

You have your dates wrong on the picture and article about the old NC&StL building being torn down [July issue]. It was actually 1965, not 1977. I have an article from the Nashville Banner.

My Dad was the superintendent on that job, and Doochin Wrecking was no longer in the wrecking business in 1977.
